**Chapter 4 — Fundamental Ethical Principles

《完全正式版（英語）》**

4. Fundamental Ethical Principles

The ZOSONEIR International Standard v1.0 is grounded in a set of universal ethical principles designed to ensure fairness, human dignity, non-discrimination, and transparent governance across diverse civilizations.

These principles form the ethical spine of the entire framework and guide all structures described in subsequent chapters.

The following principles apply across all layers (L0–L3), operational models, and adoption contexts.

4.1 Human Dignity

Human dignity is inviolable and serves as the foundation of all ethical considerations within ZOSONEIR.

Every individual is recognized as an autonomous, valuable, and irreducible being, regardless of cultural or demographic attributes.

No system—AI, institutional, or societal—may override the inherent dignity of the human person.

4.2 Non-Discrimination

Individuals shall not be discriminated against, excluded, or selected based on:

- race
- ethnicity
- nationality
- gender or gender identity
- religion or belief
- cultural background
- age
- disability
- or any inherent identity attributes

ZOSONEIR explicitly rejects selection based on identity.

However, voluntary choice (“selection by oneself”) is protected as an expression of human agency.

This principle aligns with the core value:

“Selection is prohibited; choice is respected.”

4.3 Voluntary Agency

All persons and communities must retain the freedom to choose their actions, affiliations, and modes of participation without coercion or pressure.

Voluntary Agency includes:

- freedom to adopt or not adopt ZOSONEIR
- freedom to interpret its principles
- freedom to exit or abstain
- freedom of cultural expression
- freedom to define personal identity

Coercive or forced adoption of any part of this standard is prohibited.

4.4 Transparency

Transparent governance is essential for maintaining trust, accountability, and ethical integrity.

Transparency requires:

- clarity of decision-making processes
- visibility of intent and rationale behind actions
- explainability of AI-supported judgments
- documented flows of data, authority, and responsibility

Opacity, hidden power structures, or intentional ambiguity contradict the spirit of ZOSONEIR.

4.5 Harm Prevention

All systems and actors—humans, institutions, AI—must avoid actions that cause:

- physical harm
- psychological harm
- cultural harm
- social or structural harm
- epistemic harm (distortion or misinformation)

ZOSONEIR emphasizes proactive harm prevention based on early detection, transparency, and coherence between layers.

4.6 Fairness and Equity

ZOSONEIR promotes equitable treatment across communities and individuals.

Fairness requires:

- avoiding undue advantage or disadvantage
- designing systems that do not favor particular identity groups
- ensuring equal opportunity for participation
- enabling cultural variance without hierarchy

Equity is achieved through recognition of contextual differences without enforcing uniformity.

4.7 Cultural and Ideological Neutrality

ZOSONEIR does not endorse or privilege any specific:

- culture
- ideology
- political system
- religious framework
- philosophical doctrine

Instead, it provides a neutral and interoperable ethical foundation that allows multiple systems to coexist without conflict.

4.8 Human-Centered Primacy

Humans hold ultimate authority and responsibility over systems governed by ZOSONEIR.

AI may support, enhance, or illuminate aspects of decision-making, but it may not replace human judgment.

This ensures:

- accountability
- contextual reasoning
- moral responsibility
- preservation of human agency
- alignment with collective values

4.9 Integrity and Authenticity

All participants—individuals, institutions, AI systems—must uphold integrity in:

- intention
- representation
- communication
- behavior

Authenticity encourages coherence between internal values and external actions, preventing manipulation or distortion.

4.10 Summary

The fundamental ethical principles of ZOSONEIR establish a foundation for:

- human dignity
- fairness
- transparency
- non-discrimination
- voluntary agency
- harm prevention
- human-centered governance

These principles permeate every structural component of the standard and ensure that future expansions (v1.1, v2.0, etc.) remain aligned with the original ethical intent.
